CBE budget shortfalls to worsen

CBE admin projects nearly $120-million gap in funding over next two years ◆ Trustees to be presented with preliminary budget tomorrow ◆ To read the full version of this story, visit metronews.ca/calgary

With hundreds of teaching positions already slated to be lost and some user fees rising, the worst may be yet to come for public education in Calgary.

That's according to the 2011-2012 Calgary Board of Education preliminary operating budget obtained by Metro over the weekend and scheduled to be released online today. It projects a $33.9-million shortfall for 2012-13 and $85.3 million for 2013-14.

"I'm shocked," said Eryn Kelly, co-president of the Calgary Association of Parents and School Councils, upon learning of the projected shortfalls. "This number's going to hit parents hard, really hard."

The CBE is already coping with a nearly $62-million shortfall this year and plans to slash roughly 300 support and school-based staff positions to help bridge the gap.

Dress to impress — even on a tight budget

Seven seconds are all you have to make a good first impression in an interview.

That's according to Lili Bunce, who has conducted research on the importance of appearance when seeking employment.

She also serves at the executive director of Making Changes Employment Association of Alberta, which aids women by providing wardrobe items and employment coaching.

"The objective is to keep things on a level playing field for the women we support," she says. "If they aren't looking appropriate it's really likely impossible that they will get work."

Maintaining that wardrobe once you have a job can also prove challenging. As a reporter, I am required to dress professionally. Ties, dress pants, black shoes — all these things require money I simply can't spare living on minimum wage.

Luckily, there are unorthodox events like Take Off Your Clothes. Armed with a $10 entrance fee and armfuls of clothes you no longer need, participants exchange their items for tickets that can then be used to acquire other pieces.

I participated in this swap meet of sorts yesterday. To see how I did, visit my blog (metronews.ca/Calgary/minimumliving). You can also email me at jeremy.nolais@metronews.ca or catch me on Twitter @Metro_Nolais.

▶ The scene of a fatal shooting Friday remained cordoned off yesterday as new details emerged about those involved.

Officer previously Tasered man killed in shooting

40-year-old Corey Peeace has been identified as the victim in Friday's incident ◐ Neighbours heard parties, raucous behaviour at residence

JEREMY NOLAIS
@METRONEWS.CA

The same Calgary police officer that shot and killed 40-year-old Corey Peeace in his southeast home also deployed a Taser on the man during a domestic dispute in early 2010.

This revelation came from police Chief Rick Hanson yesterday as neighbours in the 200 block of Erin Meadows Close SE continued to recover from the tragic events that unfolded Friday night.

Police were called to the home around 8 p.m. after receiving a distress call from a woman inside.

"I am comfortable that (given) the circumstances, the officers made the right decision,"
POLICE CHIEF RICK HANSON

"A male in the house is heard saying 'You're going to die today,'" Hanson said, recounting the call into police dispatch. When police arrived, they allege Peeace was seen with a knife in hand. He was shot four times by an officer and died on scene.

That same officer had a run-in with Peeace in February 2010 and subdued him with a Taser.

"Officers have a split second — a micro-second — to make a decision," Hanson said.

Members of Peeace's family, reached in Saskatchewan, aren't buying the police's rationale.

"He was such a good person," said his aunt Carolyn Peeace. "There is obviously something wrong with the system.... Heads are going to roll for this."

Investigation

- The Alberta Serious Incident Response Team is currently investigating the incident.
- Police Chief Rick Hanson said it's not unusual for the same officer to visit a home multiple times, noting they use a geographic deployment grid to assign patrol teams.
- Neighbours report that metal detectors are being used in the area near the residence during ongoing investigations.

Choir serenades Spruce Meadows

- The National is more then just show jumping
- Ladies find a venue for their talent

TODD VAUGHAN
CALGARY@METRONEWS.CA

If you were at Spruce Meadows over the weekend, you may have heard the songs of the Beatles, Frank Sinatra and Creedence Clearwater Revival.

These classic songs weren't played over a loud speaker, though. They were sung by the Rhythm of the Rockies, a ladies barbershop choir that provided the entertainment yesterday.

"This is our second year at The National tournament, and it's been great fun," said Mary Hager, the conductor for the choir.

TODD VAUGHAN/FOR METRO

▶ The Rhythm of the Rockies performed for a crowd at Spruce Meadows over the weekend.

Kathy Hellfrick organized the concert at Spruce Meadows.

"We wanted to find a public venue to gain some exposure, and Spruce Meadows was perfect with very supportive crowds," she said.

The connection between these women is an important one, according to Hellfrick.

"Our motto is to create extraordinary music with ordinary people, and our camaraderie makes this group special," she said.

Hager hopes to come to Spruce Meadows again

"It's been wonderful here, and we want this to be an annual event for us," she said.

RESCUE

Crews free man trapped in heavy machinery

Calgary firefighters used a plasma cutter to help free a man's arm from an auger early yesterday morning.

Firefighters were called out to the 3000 block of 76 Ave. SE following reports of a man trapped in an auger.

Upon arrival, firefighters located a man, presumed to be in his mid-20s, with his arm pinned in an auger that is typically used for the collection and mixing of plastics.

A plasma cutter from the CFD's heavy rescue unit was brought in, and within 25 minutes the man was freed.

The patient was turned over to Alberta Health Services for treatment and transport to hospital.

Walking to help kids with diabetes

- Participants walk to raise awareness and support

TODD VAUGHAN

Awareness was at the forefront yesterday, as people from all over southern Alberta participated in the Telus Walk to Cure Diabetes at Stanley Park.

The walk is the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation's (JDRF) largest fundraiser, and this year had 2,500 walkers attempting to raise $400,000 dollars here in Calgary and $17 million nationally.

The target goal for this year's Telus Walk to Cure Diabetes in Calgary.

"This event is about the kids who have juvenile diabetes, who have been diagnosed with something they don't need or want, and we're here to find a cure for it," said Corey McKeown, regional manager of the JDRF in southern Alberta.

He added that he was very impressed with the turnout and was happy to see so many smiling people come support the cause.

Judy Perkins, who walked today with her dog, Seeker, raised $485 to support her great-nephew, who was just diagnosed with diabetes.

"This disease could hit anyone at any time, and it's important to create awareness to try to find the cure for this," she said.

HOME ICE ADVANTAGE

On the verge of its first Stanley Cup in Canucks history, Vancouver quietly passes a dark milestone — tonight is the 125th anniversary of the night the city burned to the ground.

The Great Fire of June 13, 1886, blazed through Vancouver's mostly timbered shacks and reduced the new city (it was only two months old) to ash.

Downtown Vancouver is a different sort of tinderbox today, one sparking with nervous excitement: The whole city seems to be holding its breath for the game.

Across the province, people exhaled with wild, happy celebration after Game 5. More than 100,000 people celebrated in downtown streets.

First photos of Gabrielle Giffords show congresswoman smiling, few signs of gunshot wound She could be released from rehab facility this month

SOUTHWESTPHOTOBANK.COM, P.K. WEIS/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Images of a smiling U.S. Rep. Gabrielle Giffords were posted early yesterday on her Facebook page, two photos that show her with shorter, darker hair but few signs that she suffered a gunshot wound to the head.

The photos were taken May 17 outside the Houston rehabilitation facility TIRR Memorial Hermann, where Giffords has been undergoing intensive treatment since she was wounded five months ago at a meet-and-greet event with constituents. Six people died and a dozen others were wounded in the Jan. 8 attack in Tucson, Ariz.

Since then, access to the Arizona congresswoman has been tightly controlled. Until yesterday, no clear images had been released.

Giffords spokesman C.J. Karamargin said staff members released the photos yesterday to help satisfy "intense interest in the congresswoman's appearance."

The photos capture her ecstatic mood following her astronaut husband's space-shuttle launch in May.

"She got to see her husband successfully ride a rocket into space," Karamargin said. "So who wouldn't be pleased?"

He added: "I think this photo speaks volumes about the congresswoman's resilience and recovery.

"It shows someone in very good spirits, someone who is happy, someone who has a very positive attitude."

Studying mental hardships of High Arctic postings

As Canada asserts its Arctic sovereignty, the military wants to know whether people working in dark, isolated outposts are prone to mental breakdown.

And a recent report for the scientific arm of the Department of National Defence says the answers may be found in early expeditions to Antarctica, where polar explorers suffered a raft of psychological problems a century ago.

"Early Antarctic research identified the 'winter-over syndrome,' comprised of depression, anxiety, irritability, hostility, insomnia, and inability to concentrate," says the newly released report. "Two unique phenomena have also been noted. One is 'Big Eye,' chronic insomnia; the other is 'Long Eye,' a vacant stare denoting that the individual is ... unaware of the surrounding environment and activities."

The findings are part of a March 31 study commissioned by Toronto-based Defence Research and Development Canada, and obtained by The Canadian Press under the Access to Information Act.

The government scientist who ordered the research says the aim is to help personnel assigned to posts in the High Arctic, such as remote CFS Alert on the northeastern tip of Ellesmere Island.

Urban postal strikes roll on

Unionized Canada Post workers set for rotating strikes in 10 more cities No deal reached on weekend

A weekend of negotiations failed to produce a settlement to end rotating strikes by Canada Post's urban workers.

Canada Post spokesman Jon Hamilton said management told union negotiators that the job action has only succeeded in pushing customers away.

Hamilton said the post office feels that those customers won't return until they're sure reliable service can be provided.

He repeated the post office mantra that the union representing the workers is making unrealistic demands.

The Canadian Union of Postal Workers said on Friday that it would end the strikes if the previous collective agreement was reinstated, something the post office rejected.

Postal workers in Red Deer spent the weekend on strike and employees in 10 cities across the country will walk off the job next.

Rotating strikes will begin late Sunday night in Corner Brook, N.L., Fredericton, N.B., Sydney, N.S. and its surrounding communities, Trois-Rivieres, Que., Sherbrooke, Que., Cornwall, Ont., Windsor, Ont., Niagara Falls, Ont., Regina and Nanaimo, B.C.

The rotating strikes started June 2.

Deliveries cut

- Blaming mail volumes that have fallen by half, Canada Post said that from next week delivery in most cities will drop to three times a week — on Monday, Wednesday and Friday.
- Rural Canada will continue to have daily service. Those carriers are covered by a separate labour contract.
- By cutting staff, Canada Post can trim costs, paying workers only for hours worked. By holding rotating strikes instead of a full walkout, union members usually lose one or two days' pay.

No fracking way?

Alberta woman says natural-gas fracking to blame for flaming well water Method is an industry mainstay

Jessica Ernst fills the empty water-cooler bottle from her garden hose. The liquid bubbles and hisses like club soda and a thick white cloud floats to the top.

Something isn't right with the well water on her Alberta property.

What happens when she removes the cap from the bottle and drops in a lit wooden match is even more disconcerting. There's a loud poof and a flash of blue flame.

She repeats the procedure. This time, it's a yellow flame that lasts a little bit longer. Ernst jokes that it's her magic trick. "I might just have to take this act on the road to pay for my legal fees," she laughs.

Ernst has filed a multi-million-dollar lawsuit against energy giant EnCana, Alberta Environment and the Energy Resources Conservation Board in which she accuses them of negligence and unlawful activities.

The 54-year-old environmental consultant in the oil and gas industry blames her water problems on shallow gas wells that were drilled near Rosebud, Alta., eight years ago using a method called hydraulic fracturing, also known as fracking. It involves blasting water, chemicals and sand deep underground to break up coal formations and release natural gas.

The heat is on in Air Canada talks

Both sides in labour dispute hope to avoid strike Managers ready with backup plan, just in case

Ottawa has urged both sides in the Air Canada labour dispute to reach a negotiated agreement as soon as possible.

Lisa Raitt, the labour minister, said in a weekend statement that she is concerned about the impact of a work stoppage on Canadians and on Canada's economic recovery.

The Canadian Auto Workers, the union representing some 3,800 customer-service and sales staff, issued a 72-hour strike notice Friday, which means job action can begin at 12:01 a.m. tomorrow.

"Management has been trained to provide assistance at the airports that would be affected."

DUNCAN DEE, AIR CANADA'S CHIEF OPERATING OFFICER, ON THE AIRLINE'S BACKUP PLAN IF WORKERS VOTE TO STRIKE

Negotiations continued through the weekend and both sides said they hope to reach a deal.

A key sticking point in the talks is a proposal to change the pension plan. The airline wants new hires to receive defined-contribution plans instead of the defined-benefit plans employees currently earn.

Jamie Ross, president of the CAW local that represents the employees, said yesterday they are prepared to negotiate right up until the deadline.

The threat of job action has sparked concern from travellers. In a statement yesterday, Air Canada said it has a backup plan to continue operating a full schedule. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Divide or be conquered: Shareholders to RIM CEOs

BlackBerry maker Research in Motion Ltd. is facing a challenge from dissident shareholders who are calling for a separation in the roles of CEO and chairman. RIM is led by two executives, Jim Balsillie and Mike Lazaridis, who serve as both co-CEOs and co-chairmen.

Northwest & Ethical Investments, a Canadian investment firm, says a division of the roles is vital for the board to be able to oversee the CEOs. Balsillie and Lazaridis disagree, and said they will ask shareholders to vote against the proposal at its annual meeting on July 12.

The challenge is not the only turbulence RIM has to contend with. Last month the company said it is facing a class-action lawsuit in the U.S. that alleges it misled investors with materially false and misleading statements about its financial condition and business prospects. RIM said the allegations are without merit.

From 'A' to 'meh': CRA loses marks

The Canada Revenue Agency has been giving itself an A in its report card on service to taxpayers, but a new audit suggests the grading scheme was rigged.

Since 2006, officials have promised to reply to written requests for GST and HST rulings within 45 days at least 80 per cent of the time. In a recent report to Parliament, the CRA said it met the 45-day deadline 93 per cent of the time.

But internal auditors found that the agency had been excluding all written requests that arrive at Ottawa headquarters, counting only those handled by nine regional offices. It also started the clock ticking on replies only when the questions were entered into its computer system, not the date the request was received. The auditors gave the agency 74 per cent. Climate complaints

Released report tells the tale of frustrated environmental executives

They gave their time and expertise, but all they got back was radio silence.

That's the big gripe of business leaders who advised the government on talks between Canada and the United States to cut greenhouse gases.

Interviews with participants in the so-called Clean Energy Dialogue are peppered with complaints from executives about a lack of feedback from the feds.

Notes from those interviews were released to The Canadian Press, along with a consultant's report to Environment Canada, under the Access to Information Act.

They provide a window into industry's discontent.

"If you take them there and there is no follow up then what are they supposed to think? This sends the wrong message and they expect to be kept involved," one interviewee told the consultant.

A CALL TO RESIST THE BULLDOZERS

URBAN COMPASS

JANICE PASKEY
METRO CALGARY

When it comes to urban sprawl, a little grassy resistance is good.

I'm talking about new parks. Parks promise fun, so they matter. You won't find donations to roads or tunnels, but park philanthropy thrives.

Consider two parks to the west. One was donated by Richard Haskayne, via the University of Calgary, and the other by the Harvie family, who ranched near Cochrane for decades.

The Harvie land is now called the Glenbow Ranch Park. It has rolling grasslands, abandoned quarries, CP rail tracks and lovely views.

The donation was a modern sprawl showdown.

"Development cannot encroach any further as houses are already over our fences at every turn," Tim Harvie said in a speech posted online. "While parting ownership is difficult for our family, the knowledge that it could one day be lost to bulldozers is far more unsettling."

"But let's keep dreaming big. Let's close the loop, literally. Maybe find a way to connect Greenway to Haskayne Park. Or plan for light rail between Calgary and Cochrane with a stop near Glenbow Ranch Park, making it easy to get to."

Glenbow Ranch Park isn't open yet, but when it is (I hope soon), it will be the provincial park closest to Calgary. Fundraising is underway for park infrastructure. Ironically, though, we're back to roads; it needs road development for safe access.

The land donated by oilman Haskayne, too, needs help. It isn't far from the GRP, just north of the Bow River Reservoir — and the city is starting to plan for it. The city is waiting to see what happens with adjacent subdivisions and bike paths. I have to think the process is moving too slowly for the donor.

Speeding along, however, are two parks opening soon. You can thank the last city council for naming the Ralph Klein Park, opening June 18 in the city's southeast. It's financed by the Enmax dividend to the city. I love the contemporary park building overlooking the water.

Then, on July 14, the Parks Foundation Greenway project opens. The big idea is a pathway that completely encircles the city. The first phase runs from Airport Trail to 17th Avenue in the southeast. Cycling around the city sounds like fun. No doubt Greenway's many donors feel the same way.

But let's keep dreaming big. Let's close the loop, literally. Maybe find a way to connect Greenway to Haskayne Park. Or plan for light rail between Calgary and Cochrane with a stop near Glenbow Ranch Park, making it easy to get to.

Parks cause us to dream big. Let's credit donors and city planners who resist the bulldozer.

Worth mentioning

LONDON. Scientists are quickly combing the DNA of the killer bacteria behind the world's worst E. coli outbreak to find clues about how to treat patients and prevent future epidemics.

So far, one strain from a German patient has been sequenced by Chinese and German scientists. While the genetic information is preliminary, experts say there are a few hints about where the bacteria came from and why it might be so lethal.

The E. coli causing Europe's massive outbreak is likely the product of another strain first detected a decade ago in Germany, but with some dangerous mutations, experts say.

Because E. coli is constantly evolving, it is riddled with genes swapped from other strains found in animals and humans, giving it countless opportunities to acquire something lethal.

So far, the bug has killed at least 35 people and sickened more than 3,000, including several hundred who have developed life-threatening kidney failure.

Another twist on definition of the arts

Getting a lap dance isn't the same as taking in a ballet, so an alcohol-free strip club will have to pay the tax man, a New York state court has ruled.

Four Appellate Division justices agreed with a state tax appeals commission's earlier finding that dances onstage or in private rooms at the club Nite Moves in suburban Albany, N.Y., don't qualify for a state tax exemption as "dramatic or musical arts performances."

Nite Moves contested a tax bill of nearly $125,000 plus interest on lap dances and admission fees stemming from a 2005 audit. Its attorney, W. Andrew McCullough said Friday the club has a later, larger bill it is also challenging, and that he would probably appeal the Appellate Division ruling.

McCullough said the impact of the ruling probably won't be widespread since most establishments featuring exotic dancers as entertainment are bars mainly selling alcohol where other tax rules apply. "We admit the ballet is a little different and maybe a little more finely tuned," McCullough said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Of fathers lost and found

Estrangements can make Father's Day a quiet day for many families, but reunions can be oh so sweet Here is a story of lives touched by a father being reunited with his child

MARK SHAW, TOM DAY/ THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

In 2008, Marni Morrison's world turned upside down.

That's the year she decided to contact her birth mother, who told her that contrary to her adoption file, her birth father was very much alive.

"I said, 'what are you talking about?' because in my mind he had been dead all that time," said the 42-year-old mother of two daughters, ages 19 and 12. "I'm still trying to get it through my head that he's alive. You're told something your whole life and there's a lot of rewiring that goes on with this whole experience."

Marni grew up in suburban Minneapolis and lives in Red Wing, Minn. She was adopted at birth, the little sister of three much-older brothers born to her adoptive parents.

She'd had access to her adoption file since turning 18, but had no interest in looking at it until after becoming a mother herself, when she felt the need to check on potential health issues for her children.

She didn't find any health worries. Instead, she stumbled on a trail of lies. The file included a letter written by her birth mother in 1969 that said both her birth parents were medical students who'd planned to marry, but her birth father died in a motorcycle accident, "and it was too hard for her to keep me so she put me up for adoption," Marni said.

None of it was true, but she didn't know that until she found her birth mother and they spoke for the first time.

"She said, 'Your birth father not dead. He's a lawyer in Illinois.'"

Marni said her mother wrote the letter in an era when single mothers were often pressured to give up their babies or risk ruining their lives.

Marni and her husband, James, Googled the name her birth mother had given them for her birth father, Mark Shaw.

Two people popped up, but only one was in the right age range. But they dropped the hunt when her adoptive dad got sick. He passed away in July 2009. "He had been a rock my whole life," she said.

Nine months later, James came across a book written by someone named Mark Shaw as he searched online for advice on how to publish a play. He clicked on the author's website and staring back in a photo was a man with the same gap in his teeth as his wife.

James sent Shaw an email asking whether he had practiced law in Illinois around the time of Marni's birth. The answer was yes. The hunch was confirmed by a paternity test, and father and child now see each other often.

"I've been in a daze for the last year," Marni said. "We recently updated our insurance policy and I can offer all my information now. I've never been able to do that."

As for Mark Shaw, he said he barely knew Marni's mother.

"This was the 1960s. I was moving around like I have my whole life — so fast," the 65-year-old author, legal analyst and seminary graduate said.

He welcomed Marni, her husband and his new-found grandchildren with open arms. "I had always dreamed of being a father but just believed it wasn't going to happen," said Shaw, who is married and lives in Superior, Colo. "I look at this as the gift of a lifetime." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Quesadillas with an avocado twist

These chicken quesadillas are kicked up with avocado for a tasty and fresh take on the Mexican favourite

Don't be discouraged by the number of ingredients in this recipe for Mexican quesadillas. The recipe comes together in 40 minutes and is served with avocado citrus cream.

For a warm weather party, this will serve eight guests and it is worth the preparation.

Ingredients:

Chicken Quesadillas

- 375 ml (1 1/2 cups) shredded roasted chicken
- 175 ml (3/4 cup) canned black beans, drained
- 1 bunch green onions, white and light green parts only, thinly sliced
- 1 bunch cilantro, roughly chopped
- 45 ml (3 tbsp) minced, canned chipotle chilies
- 30 ml (2 tbsp) red wine vinegar
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) extra-virgin olive oil
- 5 ml (1 tsp) salt
- 2 ml (1/2 tsp) freshly ground black pepper
- 375 ml (1 1/2 cups) grated Mexican manchego cheese
- 250 ml (1 cup) grated panela cheese
- 125 ml (1/2 cup) grated cotija cheese
- 4 flour tortillas (each 25 cm/10 inches in diameter)
- 30 ml (2 tbsp) unsalted butter, melted
- 1 1/2 ripe, fresh avocados seeded and cut into 5-mm (1/4-inch) slices

Avocado Citrus Cream

- 1 ripe fresh avocado, seeded, peeled and quartered
- 125 ml (1/2 cup) light sour cream
- 1 lime, juiced
- 1/2 orange, juiced
- Salt and black pepper, to taste

Preparation:

1. Quesadillas: In a mixing bowl, combine chicken, black beans, onions, cilantro, chilies, vinegar, oil, salt and pepper. Let sit for 20 minutes to blend flavours.
2. In a bowl, mix cheeses together.
3. Lay tortillas on a clean counter or other work surface and brush with melted butter.
4. Place a large skillet over medium-high heat. Place a tortilla, buttered side down, into skillet and place one-quarter of the cheese mixture over entire tortilla. Place one-quarter of the chicken mixture over half of the tortilla, leaving the other half empty. Cover chicken mixture with one-quarter of the avocado slices. Cook until cheese begins to melt, 3 to 4 minutes.
5. Fold tortilla in half over avocado and chicken mixture. Continue cooking until tortilla is lightly golden on both sides and cheese begins to ooze. Repeat with remaining quesadillas and ingredients.
6. Avocado Citrus Cream: Meanwhile, combine ingredients in a blender or food processor and blend until smooth.
7. Cut quesadillas into wedges; serve with cream.

Bacon & beans prove simple can be great

Want to build a better salad? Lose the chill, ditch some of the fruit and get the proportions of the vinaigrette right.

That's the advice of Jacques Pepin, star of a new public television series — Essential Pepin — that will air in the fall.

Pepin says a great salad can be simple as long as the ingredients are fresh and the proportions are right. Too much fruit produces a salad that is too sweet. Likewise, most salads taste best when served cool, but not cold.

"Also important is the use of great-quality oils and vinegars," he said. "And these should be mixed in the proper ratios: one part vinegar to three parts oil, or one part vinegar to four parts oil."

Pepin offers a warm salad of bacon or pancetta tossed with white beans. It is a hearty salad but still feels fresh thanks to a generous use of vinegar and chopped fresh parsley.

"I love beans," he said. "When they are combined with pancetta and seasoned with vinegar, garlic and olive oil, the result is a salad that is almost like a stew."

Preparation:

1. In saucepan over low heat, place bacon. Sauté, covered, for 8 minutes, or until meat has rendered much of its fat. Add onion and garlic and cook, stirring, for about 5 seconds.
2. Transfer contents of saucepan, fat and all, to a large bowl. Add beans, salt, parsley, vinegar, oil and pepper. Mix well, then serve warm or at room temperature.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS/ ESSENTIAL PEPIN BY JACQUES PEPIN (HOUGHTON MIFFLIN HARCOURT, OCTOBER, 2011)

Ingredients:

- 250 g (8 oz) slab bacon or pancetta, cut into 1-cm (1/2-inch) pieces
- 1 medium onion, chopped (about 250 ml/1 cup)
- 6 garlic cloves, crushed and chopped
- 2 cans (398 ml/14 oz) navy or other small white beans, rinsed and drained
- 2 ml (1/2 tsp) salt
- 125 ml (1/2 cup) chopped fresh parsley
- 45 ml (3 tbsp) red wine vinegar
- 45 ml (3 tbsp) olive oil
- 5 ml (1 tsp) ground black pepper

CHEWING OVER SAFETY ISSUES WITH BPA

My son chews on his crib railing protector. It says it's BPA- and phthalate-free, but made of plastic #4 or PVC. If I don't use it, he'll chew on the wood and paint. Is a plastic cover my only option? Melissa of Sherwood Park, Alberta

QUEEN OF GREEN

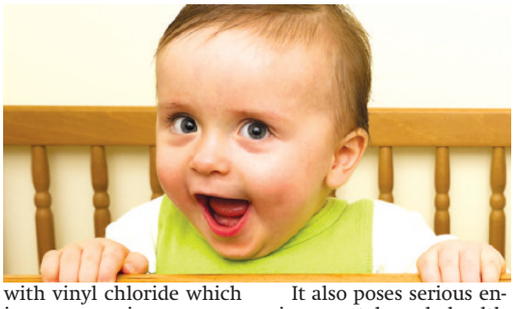
LINDSAY COULTER
GREEN@METRONEWS.CA

You're on the right track to avoid plastics that contain toxic chemicals, like Bisphenol-A (BPA) and phthalates. But I think you may have the plastic number and name confused. Let me explain.

Plastic #4 is actually low-density polyethylene or LDPE. It's less toxic than other plastics. PVC, on the other hand, is polyvinyl chloride or plastic #3.

It's widely used because it's cheap, durable, and easy to assemble. PVC is less safe because it's made with vinyl chloride which is cancer-causing.

ISTOCK PHOTO



It also poses serious environmental and health threats at all stages of its life cycle —from manufacturing to use to disposal.

The good news is that safer and cost-effective alternatives are already available for virtually every PVC product out there, including baby products.

You can find PVC-free teethers, pacifiers, bibs, bath toys, and even Halloween costumes. The Centre for Health, Environment and Justice suggests this jingle to help you remember: "bad news comes in threes, don't buy PVC."

Since your crib railing protector is BPA- and phthalate-free, it's likely as safe as it gets. The other option would be an organic cotton cloth cover.

Years of costly research and development followed and now their company, Turf Revolution, based in Ayr, Ont., is set to grow 74 per cent this year. The business is exciting and they just expanded into the U.S. market, but Tammy admits guiding a company through the recent global recession has taken a huge toll on their lives.

BOOK REVIEW

CRAIG LUND
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

Caitlin Kelly, a veteran journalist facing declining opportunities for quality paying writing assignments, picked up a retail gig in an upscale neighbourhood mall to create some additional part-time income. In her book, Malled, she journals her two year retail stint.

"I have never worked in any job that paid so little for such hard work," says Kelly.

Even though 70 per cent of the U.S. economy relies on its GDP from consumer spending, "retail sales associates, clerks, floor walkers, team members – whatever you choose to call them – remain oddly invisible in the media." Kelly's book offers some sobering insights into this gruelling and highly under appreciated job. Kelly attributes the silence because "most workers doing these tough jobs for low wages are those least able to afford losing them... they have powerful incentive to remain silent."

Told from the perspective of an experienced professional, Kelly's insights offer a sympathetic look into the backrooms of the sales floors we peruse... I for one will certainly be more patient and friendly on my next shopping trip.

Is long wait almost over?

Canucks poised to become first Canadian team in 18 years to bring home the Stanley Cup

The last time a Canadian-based team won the Stanley Cup — the Montreal Canadiens in 1993 — it was no big deal.

Well, it was a really big deal if you were a fan of the Canadiens, who caused a surprise by reaching the final and then dispatching Wayne Gretzky's Los Angeles Kings in five games to claim their record 24th cup. Big enough that there was a riot in downtown Montreal after the cup-clinching game.

But in those days, a Canadian team winning it all was the norm rather than the exception.

If the Vancouver Canucks beat the Boston Bruins this season, it would end an 18-year cup drought for the country that lives and dies with hockey. And it would end a jinx that saw the 1994 Canucks, 2004 Calgary Flames, 2006 Edmonton Oilers and 2007 Ottawa Senators all lose in the final.

When Montreal last drank from the silver bowl, it ended Mario Lemieux and the Pittsburgh Penguins' two-year reign. But before that, the cup had been won seven straight years by Canadian teams — five by the Oilers and one each by Montreal (1986) and Calgary (1989).

"There's 30 teams in the league now and every year it's very competitive," Vincent Damphousse, the scoring leader on the 1993 Montreal team, said this week. "It's not like the 1950s or '60s where you could build a team and keep it together and have a dynasty."

"I think you'll see a lot of teams going 20, 30, 40 years without winning now."
VINCENT DAMPHOUSSE ON THE DIFFICULTY OF WINNING THE CUP

The 1992-93 Canadiens rode other-worldly goaltending from Patrick Roy and a record 10 consecutive overtime victories to a cup few gave them any chance of winning after a regular season in which they finished third in what was then called the Adams Division, behind Boston and detested rival the Quebec Nordiques.

General manager Serge Savard had made two key pre-season acquisitions, picking up scoring forwards Damphousse and Brian Bellows, to add scoring punch to a group led by centre Kirk Muller, captain Guy Carbonneau, gritty winger Mike Keane and promising young winger John LeClair.

The top defence pair had point man Mathieu Schneider and tough guy Lyle Odelein, followed by Eric Desjardins and Jean-Jacques Daigneaut.

Mavs win NBA crown

For Dirk Nowitzki, the resumé is complete. He's an NBA champion.

For LeBron James, the agonizing wait continues for at least one more year.

Avenging what happened five years ago in perfect turnabout style, the Dallas Mavericks won their first NBA title by winning Game 6 of this final in Miami 105-95 last night — celebrating on the Heat's home floor, just as Dwyane Wade and his team did to them in the 2006 title series.

MAVERICKS	HEAT
105	95

Jason Terry scored 27 points and Nowitzki added 21. The Mavericks won four of the series' last five games, a turnabout that could not have been sweeter after seeing the Heat celebrate their first title in Dallas after Game 6 of the 2006 finals.

"Tonight," Terry said, "we got vindication."

James scored 21 points for Miami, shook a few hands afterward, and departed before most of the Mavs tugged on their championship hats and T-shirts. Chris Bosh had 19, Mario Chalmers 18 and Wade 17 for the Heat.
